

Pros To Seek Sullivan After M-D Windup

By Steve Gavin
Sports Editor

The Detroit (nee Fort Wayne) Pistons are prepared to pick Mount St. Mary's great, Jack Sullivan either on the first or second round of the National Basketball Association player draft next month, head coach Charlie Eckman told The Greyhound in an exclusive interview.

"That is, of course, if he's still around when our turn comes to pick," says Eckman, who recently signed a new three-year pact to guide the transplanted Fort Wayne basketballers.

Some other N.B.A. clubs are interested in Sully, too, but their draft preparations have had him around sixth or seventh because of a story that Jack wanted to do a three-year Marine Corps hitch upon graduation.

This is incorrect says St. Mary's coach Jim Phelan who adds that Sullivan "has his heart set on playing pro ball."

Thus, the other N.B.A. teams may also start angling for Jack in the top rounds. However, Eckman, if possible, will definitely name Sully on the first or second go-round.

The Piston skipper, who has been personally interested in Jack for over a year, says, "We'd really like to have Sullivan on the Pistons. We've got three boys on our team who are just taped together now and I don't know how much longer they can last. We need help for next year and I think Jack could do us some good."

If Sully makes the grade, he'll become the first graduate of the Mason-Dixon Conference to succeed in the N.B.A. Loyola's Joel Hittleman was drafted by Fort Wayne in 1953, but was cut just before the season began.

However, there's still some unfinished business on the agenda for Sullivan as there is for Loyola, the host school in the three-day Mason-Dixon Conference tournament which opens tonight on the Evergreen court at 5:15.

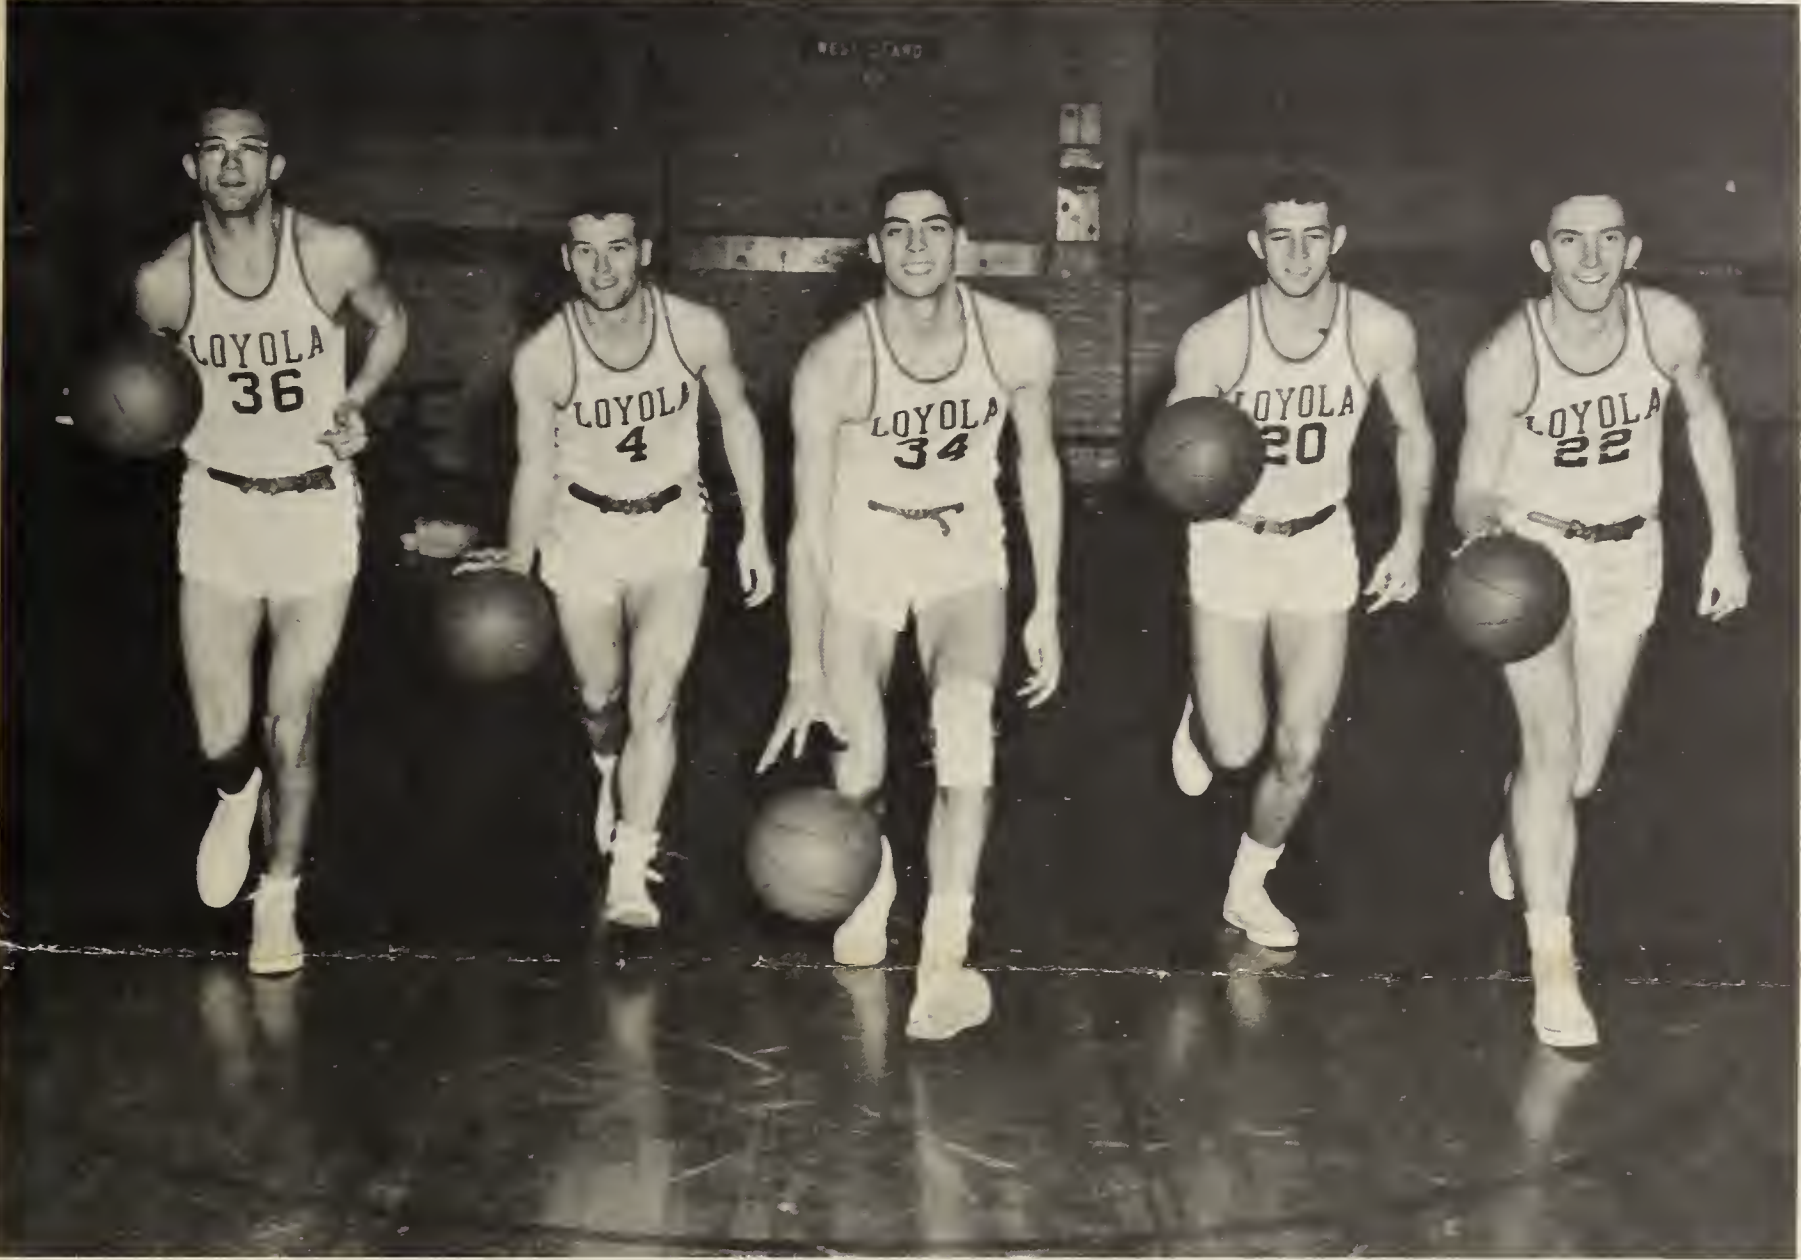

Capping off a brilliant career that has seen him establish new state career and single season scoring marks and become the first player to make the All Conference team for four years, the stocky Sully leads the Conference champion Mountaineers into tournament play gunning for an unprecedented fourth straight M-D title.

Major opposition is expected to come from Loyola, which last year won the regular season crown only to get knocked off by arch-foe St. Mary's, 107-86, in the tourney final.

This time, however, the Hounds figure the shoe to be on the other foot and they would like nothing better than to personally take the kick out of Sullivan and his playmates and lasso Loyola's first tourney title since 1953.

Of course, Denny McGuire's untimely injury may hamper the Greyhounds' rebounding somewhat, but a recovered George Leyh and dependable Jim Staiti are prepared to answer the call for backboard strength.

Roanoke poses as the outside threat for the title, but jumping-jack Hampden-Sydney, if on, might even take it all away.

ON THE FIRING LINE for tonight's 10:15 tournament opener are five Loyola seniors (l. to r.); Paul Dodd, Earl Hamper, Jim Staiti, Jack Benzing, and Harp Fitzgerald.

Is Tourney Hex On Champion?

Winning the regular season championship isn't a guarantee of success in the Mason-Dixon Conference basketball tournament. In fact, if anything, it's a sign of impending disaster.

Only once in the last six years — 1954, with Mount St. Mary's — has a conference champion been able to successfully defend its laurels when it came time for the M-D tourney.

Overall, the mark is seven wins in sixteen post-season tries for the loop kingpins for a somewhat unprinciply .438 percentage.

Loyola, which has five tourney titles, — more than any other club — has failed on three occasions to add the playoff bunting after making off with the regular season flag. Next in line is Roanoke, which has been twice-frustrated.

Mount St. Mary's is batting .500 in this department having struck out in 1951, before its 1954 clean sweep.

American U., which like St. Mary's has four tourney titles, shows only three loop crowns, all double victories, however.

What's the reason. behind this trend which has found the conference champion nine-times dethroned in the tourney?

Lefty Reitz, who qualifies as an authority on the subject since his Loyola quint has never missed a post-season party, has an explanation.

"I think the main reason is because of the scheduling," explains

Reitz. "There is no uniform scheduling in the league so most schools don't play the same number of games or don't play the same teams as others do."

"Another point, of course, is that you never know how a team will fare in any given game. And in the tourney, of course, one bad game will finish you."

GUARANTEED TO HAPPEN AT THE TOURNAMENT:

A coach will complain about the officiating.

A girl will drop her purse below the stands and while the boyfriend crawls underneath to find it, the most exciting play of the tournament will be made.

The program will list a wrong set of uniform numbers.

Two customers will show up on a perfectly clear night decked out in raincoats, rainhats and boots, then sheepishly explain to the puzzling-looking fans seated nearby, "It looked like rain when we left."

A group of children will shoot imaginary baskets during halftime.

A pair of chic femmes will casually discuss the latest shades of lipstick during the tensest moment of the final game.

Fr. Conlin will go through at least two cigars a game.

A particularly devoted figure filbert, who's been keeping everyone's score, will have his pencil break at a hectic point in the contest then, after pestering everyone seated nearby to borrow another, he will further harass his companions by asking who scored the last four baskets.

When the score crosses 90, the fans will immediately set up the clamor, "We want 100."

Jim Henneman will do his usual first-rate job keeping the working press happy.

When the opposition coach jumps in dismay after a particularly notorious call, some leather-lunged fan will bellow to the ref, "Call a technical on 'im."

At least one enterprising youth will show up the gate bearing a hand-written "press card" claiming he's to cover the game for the Watercloset (W. Va.) Daily News.

A feminine fan will be overheard to say, "Don't those boys look silly in shorts.?"

Jim Phelan will tell a reporter that Jack Sullivan is the greatest player he ever coached.

Some sidecourt slide-rule statistician will call the morning paper the day after the game and demand that the box score is incorrect.

Jack Sullivan will tell a reporter that Jim Phelan is the best coach he ever played for.

Reitz Is Dean Of Hoop Coaches

Has Coached For Nineteen Seasons

Practical Political Science textbooks to the contrary, the splinter part still exerts a strong influence on the American scene.

Perhaps not so much in diplomatic circles, but certainly in the politics of winning basketball games is the splinter party most influential as coaches digest and direct their teams' activities from a bench that oftentimes is much too confining.

The Mason-Dixon Conference will put on a display of its top Basketball Science instructors beginning tonight when the masterminds convene for round one of the annual Conference basketball convention.

Winning the title of imperial potentate of the M-D coaching clientage hands-up (in dismay over a foul, undoubtedly) is Emil G. "Lefty" Reitz, Loyola's veteran skipper of nineteen campaigns who locked up his 300th coaching victory at Evergreen during the past season.

Following graduation from Villanova in 1933 and a brief professional baseball stint, Reitz moved to Evergreen as head basketball coach in 1937. A year later, he was promoted to athletic director, a position he still holds today.

Roanoke's J. S. "Buddy" Hackman is another "old-timer" among Conference coaches. Joseph Sandy has been athletic director and basketball coach at Roanoke since 1942. A former college football player, Hackman was an All-American back at Tennessee in 1930.

Perhaps the most successful coach from a won-lost stand-point has been James J. Phelan, whose Mount St. Mary's clubs have won the title twice in the two years he has guided them.

LEFTY REITZ receives an autographed football from Baltimore Colts' president Don Kellert (right) on occasion of Reitz' 300th coaching triumph at Loyola.

Paul Dodd, Loyola	Frank Smith, Mt. St. Mary's
Tony Pistorio, Loyola	Bill Stanley, Mt. St. Mary's
Dave Feltz, Roanoke	Bob Talbot, Catholic U.
Frank Weiss, American U.	Joe Seivold, Washington

Phelan, a former LaSalle defensive great, is the only Mason-Dixon hoop coach to have played in the National Basketball Association.

James T. "Miggs" Reilly, who played pro basketball in the Eastern League just after the War, is in his fourth year at the helm of Catholic University's basketballers.

A Georgetown graduate, Reilly served as an assistant with the Hoyas and as head basketball coach at Georgetown Prep before taking over at C.U. in 1953. He also is a practicing attorney in Washington, D. C.

After a highly successful high school coaching career at Kenwood High, Ed Elliott has moved into Mason-Dixon competition as the Baltimore University mentor. Likeable and softspoken, Elliott hustled Kenwood to the Baltimore County League championship before coming to the Bees.

Another new face to Conference coaching ranks is that of David "Dave" Carrasco, a native Texan who is generaling at American University. An All-Conference player for his Texas Western alma mater, the six-foot-four Carrasco gained local coaching experience at Montgomery Blair High School before taking over at A.U. from retiring "Dutch" Schulze this season.

At Montgomery Blair, Carrasco's teams won three State titles in four years.

Ross Sachs, the Johns Hopkins cage coach, was Little All-American football quarterback at Gettysburg (Pa.) College. Sachs is the only Hopkins coach who handles two major sports since he also guides the Blue Jay baseball team. An extremely hard worker, Sachs first came to Homewood in 1953, moving up into the baseball and basketball coaching slots a year ago.

Perhaps the most energetic coach in the Conference is fiery Lou Miller of Hampden-Sydney. A fierce competitor who feels all the action, Miller likes his teams to play quick, clever basketball.

RUNNING WITH

A fan will come for the last game, forgetting that his team played at 5:15. When informed of his mistake, he will start crawling over the customers inquiring: "Say buddy, can you tell me who won the first game and what the score was?"

A girl will jump up and screech when the opposition runs onto the floor. After being glared into silence by her companions, she will languidly explain, "Oh, I thought they were our side!"

An Alumnus will tell his bored wife for the umpteenth time, "I remember when Jim Lacy was playing and he . . ."

Loyola will win it all.

BOOSTING Hound spirits for the upcoming Mason-Dixon Conference Tournament are cheerleaders Sam Donahue (top) and Box Fox.

Publicist Henneman

Sees Loyola—St. Mary's In Final

By Jim Henneman
Sports Publicity Director

There will be eight teams the first night and two the last night!

Don't laugh, pal — because that is the only safe prediction that can be made on the forthcoming MD Tournament.

From this angle it still looks like Mt. St. Mary's and Loyola for the Thursday night finale.

Here again, we have the chance, and a not too far fetched one, at that, that one or both of these outfits won't reach the finals.

The first night may find at least one, and possibly two of the seeded teams dropping out. We base this conviction on the overall balance of the fifth, sixth, seventh, and eighth place teams, rather than on the weakness of the first four. The second night should find two of the remaining seeded teams winning, thus assuring no tremendous upset in the finals.

First of all Loyola, who once was the proud owner of the most feared bench strength in the league, will be operating with only nine men. The loss of Gene Grimes, and lately Denny McGuire has dealt "Lefty" a serious blow — one that could be the knock-out punch.

The Mounts, on the other hand, will have to play the staggering total of six games in seven days — the last five in a row — in order to reach the finals.

The scene is set for a big fall — but don't bet on that either.

It will be Loyola vs. the Mount for the 4th straight year and then who knows.

Hats Off—A Salute To Winter Sportmen

Basketball

Swimming
